Autumn.

Yes, perhaps another Automa, I'll be cold beneath the sod;

And this tollwarn, weary spirit Will be resting with its God.

Resting, free from care and sorrow;

For Pre lived to know that sadness,

Mingles with life's every strain;

And every ray of home or gladness, Brings with it to some thull of pain-

The longest hope that life can measure,

I'll sigh no more at thoughts of dying,

Earth's sordid measure, no more crave;

Content, what withered leaves of Autumn May rustle on my peaceful grave.

Fruit Trees-Fall Transportation & Fall Transplanting.

At present the supply of fruit trees in the West and South-vest is not hait equal to the demand. The deficierry, . " great measure is made up by orders nem l'asiern naiscries. Some of these trees are ordered and snipped in the fall: hat many of thear are delayed until sping. The spring with us usually quens several weeks enthe, that where the isees are grown, and consequently they cannot be taken an until regelacion la the West is considerably advanced, and if they are forwarded without delay, when they arrive, it is entirely too bue infthe season to plant them, and the reall is, the loss of many of the trees, and even if they sarrive this late planting. they will make but a feeble growth the urst season and will require several rears of good treatment to become established. But in the spring time of the year ever transportation line is so pressed with goods waiting shipment, that all the light, bulky anticles, like trees, are often delayed in the warehouses until the neavier freight is forwarded, and the scason so far advanced the trees become so u.uch dried that thousands are thereby los .. We know of tone company that lost last spring $8,000 worth of trees in this way, and who have brought suit against the transportation company for that amount of damages,

We advise all who intend ordering trees from a distance to do so this? fall, and if not prepared to set them, "lay them in" antil spring. It is always best to order trees by some of the Express Freight lines and take a receipt for them to be delivered within a specified time.

asked, when is the best time to plant fruit trees? We answer, that upon all soils suitable for an orchard, the fall is the best time. The fall is a season of cionati. comparative leisure with the farmer, and ample time is afforded him to prepare the ground thoroughly, and to dig the holes of a large size and to prepare tha work in the most perfect manner. In on all their lin the spring a thousand jobs are pressing upon the tarmer, all demanding his immediate attention, and the orchard is usually defered to the last, when every other crop would suffer less by the de-

If tiees are planted in the fall, the earth; become firmly settled around the roots before spring, and if the weather should prove, as it frequently does, warm in February and March, young roots will be formed, often three inches long; and if the planting is delayed until spring, after these roots have put out, they are broken off and lost in the act of removal from the nurseries, and consequently so much of the vital energy of the trees is lost in the effect of Lature to repair the

It planting is delayed until spring, it is almost always untoff until a late period after the buds have considerably swelled and many of the Abicus roots have put oul; these roots then become dried and many of them lost, and from the dry weather that fire juantly tollows cause the FAMILY RESIDENCE death of thousands of trees annually.

In fall planting, if the soil is dry and porous, as it should be the ground around the tree may be left level, has if the subsoil is of a wet, Istentive character the I would say that, on several accounts, it is one earth should be trised 1 wo or three in to of the most descrable lo ation to be found in thes around the trunk of the tree, to the the city. The House is of brick and is large full diameter of the bole, is order to turn the excess of the crifrom the roots.

Trees should not be removed from the nursery until state of front has occurred to entirely suspend veg total a, and the leaves have mostly fallen.
